Period for Reply

A SHORTENED STATUTORY PERIOD FOR REPLY IS SET TO EXPIRE 3 MONTH(S) FROM THE MAILING DATE OF THIS COMMUNICATION.

- Extensions of time may be available under the provisions of 37 CFR 1.136(a). In no event, however, may a reply be timely filed after SIX (6) MONTHS from the mailing date of this communication.
- If the period for reply specified above is less than thirty (30) days, a reply within the statutory minimum of thirty (30) days will be considered timely.
- If NO period for reply is specified above, the maximum statutory period will apply and will expire SIX (6) MONTHS from the mailing date of this communication.
- Failure to reply within the set or extended period for reply will, by statute, cause the application to become ABANDONED (35 U.S.C. § 133). Any reply received by the Office later than three months after the mailing date of this communication, even if timely filed, may reduce any earned patent term adjustment. See 37 CFR 1.704(b).

Status

- 1) ☒ Responsive to communication(s) filed on 05 August 2003.
- 2a) ☐ This action is FINAL. 2b) ☒ This action is non-final.

DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

2. Claims 1,4,5,8,10 rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Elaine Roberts (GB2258411A).

Claim 1: Roberts teaches a board game (9) having game pieces (44-49), game spaces of different categories (29), category question cards (54), and photographs (36). Broadly speaking photographs having famous faces (36) are being interpreted as family pictures.

Claims 4,5: Rules for playing a game do not further limit an apparatus claim.

Claim 8: Categories being identified by colors (Page 3 lines 4-5, reference character 52).

Claim 10: Answer sheet (43,54).

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

4. Claims 1-5,8,10 rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as obvious over Selby

(5280914) in view of Ex.Parte Breslow 192 USPQ 431.

Selby teaches a board game (10) having game pieces (12), game spaces of different categories (14,16,18), category question cards (28,30,32), and photographs (25). Broadly speaking photographs having famous faces (25) are being interpreted as family pictures.

Selby teaches all limitations except that it does not expressly indicate photos being "family photos".

In order to make the game attractive to family members, it would have been obvious to use family photos. One of ordinary skill in art at the time the invention was made would have suggested modifying cited photos to include family photos to make the game attractive for family members.

Claim 2: Selby teaches all limitations except that it does not expressly teach applicant's claimed categories.

The only difference between cited categories and applicant's categories resides in meaning and information conveyed by the printed matter and the difference is not considered patentable Ex. Parte Breslow. The category difference between identifying a picture of a family member, or identifying a picture of any famous person, does not change the game.

In order to make the game attractive to family members, it would have been obvious to use categories in family photos. One of ordinary skill in art at the time the invention was made would have suggested modifying cited categories to include categories of family photos to make the game attractive for family members.

Claims 3-5: Rules for playing a game do not further limit an apparatus claim

Claim 8: Categories being identified by colors (indicia on categories).

Claim 10: Answer sheet (26).

5. Claims 1-5,8,10 rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as obvious over Elaine Roberts in view of Ex.Parte Breslow 192 USPQ 431.

Claim 1: Roberts teaches a board game (9) having game pieces (44-49), game spaces of different categories (29), category question cards (54), and photographs (36). Broadly speaking photographs having famous faces (36) are being interpreted as family pictures.

Roberts teaches all limitations except that it does not expressly indicate photos being "family photos".

Art Unit: 3712

In order to make the game attractive to family members, it would have been obvious to use family photos. One of ordinary skill in art at the time the invention was made would have suggested modifying cited photos to include family photos to make the game attractive for family members.

Claim 2: Roberts teaches all limitations except that it does not expressly teach applicant's claimed categories.

Roberts however does indicate at possibility of including other categories (page 5, last line). The only difference between cited categories and applicant's categories resides in meaning and information conveyed by the printed matter and the difference is not considered patentable Ex. Parte Breslow. The category difference between identifying a picture of a family member, or identifying a picture of any famous person, does not change the game.

In order to make the game attractive to family members, it would have been obvious to use categories in family photos. One of ordinary skill in art at the time the invention was made would have suggested modifying cited categories to include categories of family photos to make the game attractive for family members.

Claims 3-5: Rules for playing a game do not further limit an apparatus claim

Claim 8: Categories being identified by colors (Page 3 lines 4-5, reference character 52).

Claim 10: Answer sheet (43,54).

6. Claims 1-5,8,10,11-15,18,20 rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as obvious over Elaine Roberts in view of Tweedy (US2002/0195772A1).

Art Unit: 3712

Roberts teaches a board game (9) having game pieces (44-49), game spaces of different categories (29), category question cards (54), and photographs (36).

Broadly speaking photographs having famous faces (36) are being interpreted as family pictures.

Roberts teaches all limitations except that it does not expressly indicate photos being "family photos".

Tweedy teaches using family photos (abstract)

In order to make the game attractive to family members, it would have been obvious to use family photos. One of ordinary skill in art at the time the invention was made would have suggested modifying cited photos to include family photos to make the game attractive for family members.

Claim 2: Roberts teaches all limitations except that it does not expressly teach applicant's claimed categories.

The category difference between identifying a picture of a family member or identifying a picture of any famous person does not change the game.

In order to make the game attractive to family members, it would have been obvious to use categories in family photos. One of ordinary skill in art at the time the invention was made would have suggested modifying cited categories to include categories of family photos to make the game attractive for family members.

Claims 3-5: Rules for playing a game do not further limit an apparatus claim

Claim 8: Categories being identified by colors (Page 3 lines 4-5, reference character 52).

Claim 10: Answer sheet (43,54).

Claim 11: Roberts teaches a board game (9) having game pieces (44-49), game spaces of different categories (29), category question cards (54), and photographs (36). Broadly speaking photographs having famous faces (36) are being interpreted as family pictures.

Roberts teaches all limitations except that it does not expressly indicate photos being "collected and organized from family photos".

Art Unit: 3712

In order to make the game attractive to family members, it would have been obvious to collect family photos. One of ordinary skill in art at the time the invention was made would have suggested modifying Robert's photos to include family photos to make the game attractive for family members.

Claims 12-15: Roberts teaches all limitations except that it does not expressly teach applicant's claimed categories.

The category difference between identifying a picture of a family member or identifying a picture of any famous person does not change the game.

In order to make the game attractive to family members, it would have been obvious to use categories in family photos. One of ordinary skill in art at the time the invention was made would have suggested modifying cited categories to include categories of family photos to make the game attractive for family members.

Claim 18: Categories being identified by colors (Page 3 lines 4-5, reference character 52) by Roberts.

Claim 20: Answer sheet (43,54) taught by Roberts.

7. Claims 6,7,16,17 rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as obvious over Elaine Roberts in view of Bouchal (4637799).

Art Unit: 3712

Roberts teaches all limitations except that it does not teach cards or pictures in the shape of an album.

Bouchal teaches a game for identifying pictures and provides an album (18:15-27).

Albums provide a storyline of photos when arranged logically. Such arrangement provides amusement and further enhances the entertainment value of the game for participants. In order to make the game amusing and more entertaining, it would have been obvious to provide photos in a fixed arrangement in an album. The means for identifying family in the photograph is broadly interpreted by female pictures for women and male pictures for men.

8. Claims 9,19 rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as obvious over Elaine Roberts in view of Olsen (6672590).

Roberts teaches all limitations except that it does not teach a "lose a turn card". Olsen teaches a "lose a turn card" (80). Board game art recognizes "lose a turn" card as penalty cards in order to make the game challenging.

One of ordinary skill in art at the time the invention was made would have used such a step for making the game more challenging.

9. Claim 11 rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as obvious over Selby in view of Tweedy (US2002/0195772A1).

Claim 11: Selby teaches a board game (10) having game pieces (12), game spaces of different categories (14,16,18), category question cards (28,30,32), and photographs (25). Broadly speaking photographs having famous faces (25) are being interpreted as family pictures.

Art Unit: 3712

Selby teaches all limitations except that it does not expressly indicate photos being "collected and organized from family photos".

Tweedy teaches collecting and organizing family photos (abstract lines 1-4)

The only difference between collecting photos of famous persons in Roberts and applicant's photos of family persons resides in meaning and information and the difference is not considered patentable. The photo being a family photo or any other person's photo does not change the game.

In order to make the game attractive to family members, it would have been obvious to collect family photos. One of ordinary skill in art at the time the invention was made would have suggested modifying Selby's photos to include family photos to make the game attractive for family members.
